

Hundreds Die Fleeing Blasts

The Associated Press

Lagos, Nigeria—On Monday, January 28, 2002, Ben Nwachukwa found over 200 bodies drown in a canal in Lagos, Nigeria which is located at 10°N and 10°E. A fire in the area spread and caused some bombs to explode at an army base. People began fleeing and dove into a canal but they didn't know how deep it was. Many people drown and the current carried them downstream. That is how Ben Nwachukwa found the bodies.
