

STONES, SEEDS, SINEWS AND STUFF

WRITTEN BY SANDY MARTINEZ

Everyone needs food,
water, shelter, and
clothing.

Long ago, people had to know where to find what they needed.

They gathered berries,
beans, nuts, and seeds.

They hunted animals and
fished in the rivers,
lakes, and oceans.

Stones could be used for hunting, cooking, and protection.

Sometimes it was hard to find food, so people had to move.

Staying close to water
was always important.

Animal skins were used for many things.

People needed to tie things together to make tools, weapons, shelter, and clothing.

Early string was made from grass, leather or sinews from animals.

Can you think of another way early people used their environment to get what they needed?
