

RESPONSE:

I believe these photos represent both a refugee and refugees accepted and taken in to start a new life, and some who were not accepted and left behind.

To me, the photo on top, of the child, shows a saved and rescued refugee. This photo makes me think of somebody finding them and saving them, or taking them to a safer place. Perhaps this child was separated from their family and just found them again, or found someone who can help them. This picture spoke to me because of the child looking out and how it makes me think and visualize the situation they were facing. I hope this person found safety and got accepted and found a happier life with their family.

The photo on the bottom reminds me of immigrants who have not been accepted. The people in this photo speak to me because of their looks of concern and disappointment on their faces. It represents and makes me think of the hard times they may be going through and what troubles they face.

All in all, I think this assignment and these pictures are an example of how a picture can speak a thousand words, represent many things, and open people's eyes. These pictures were the ones that spoke to me, and I believe photos like these and others can be very important, influential, and powerful.

Refugee: a person who has been forced to leave their country in order to escape war, persecution, or natural disaster.

This picture is of Jewish refugees. I believe this picture shows us the people during this time and what they had to do. As you can see they had to wear the Star of David on their breast plate. It's also shows the age range between the refugees and that it could be your great grandpa or your newborn baby brother.

This pictures shows that refugees are indeed human beings. The Germans thought of the Jewish as garbage or simply not people. This shows that the refugees even if people don't believe it are humans just like us, with feelings, and souls, and emotions.
